A Virginia Woman's Tribute to the Late Major Eakle.

"Catherine Moore," of the Louisville the character of the late Major B. F.

Eakle, for so many years the manager of the White Sulphur, "Catherine Moore" is the pen-name of Mrs. William J.

Hardy, of Louisville, formerly Miss Sallie Ewing Marshall, of Virginia. She says of Major Eakle: "The good Major looked well to the comfort and pleasure of every guest, but it was the young people he was most interested in. He had seen the firtations going on there year after year for so many long years that he knew it was not very serious love-making in most cases, and therefore quite harmless. He was the friend of every young man on the grounds, and while naturally, of course, he was partial to the Virginians, being one himself, and liking to see them win in every affair of the heart, yet he lent a ready ear to the many confidences which were made to him, and gave plentiful sympathy when things went wrong. He had a keen sense of humor, and I re-member was delighted at the discomfiture fellow; so there will be no great loss. You must remember you are expected to act like a lady this evening, and whoever saw any young lady behaving like you were just now. No matter how anx-

"Ah! but the belles of the season, they were the ones who reigned supreme with the Major, and she who happened to be, without question, 'la plus belle' among all the beauties gathered there, could do no wrong in his sight, and could get anything to be obtained at the springs. A cynical man from Baltimore once chanced to say, in the Major's presence, that 'the chief thing necessary to make a girl a belle was a total disregard for the feelings of others and an immense opinion of herself, when the Major blazed opinion of herself, when the Major bazed forth in such wrath that it would have been a brave man, indeed, who would have repeated the assertion. As major in the Fourteenth Virginia Cavalry, he was one of the bravest men in the Confederate service, and was wounded four times. In the battle of the Wilderness times. In the battle of the and passed a ball penetrated his hip and passed almost entirely through his body, and at almost entirely through his body, and at

Gettysburg he had several horses shot under him. Altogether, he was a splen-did Virginia gentleman, and there are numerous Louisville women who will regret to hear of his death, and who would have been glad, in any way, to have 'smoothed his path from earth to Heaven.'"
